

The Treaty Trail:
U. S. - Indian Treaty Councils in the Northwest

This image of Toowe-tak-hes (also known as Chief Joseph) was created by Gustav Sohon on May 29, 1855.

Courtesy Washington State Historical Society.

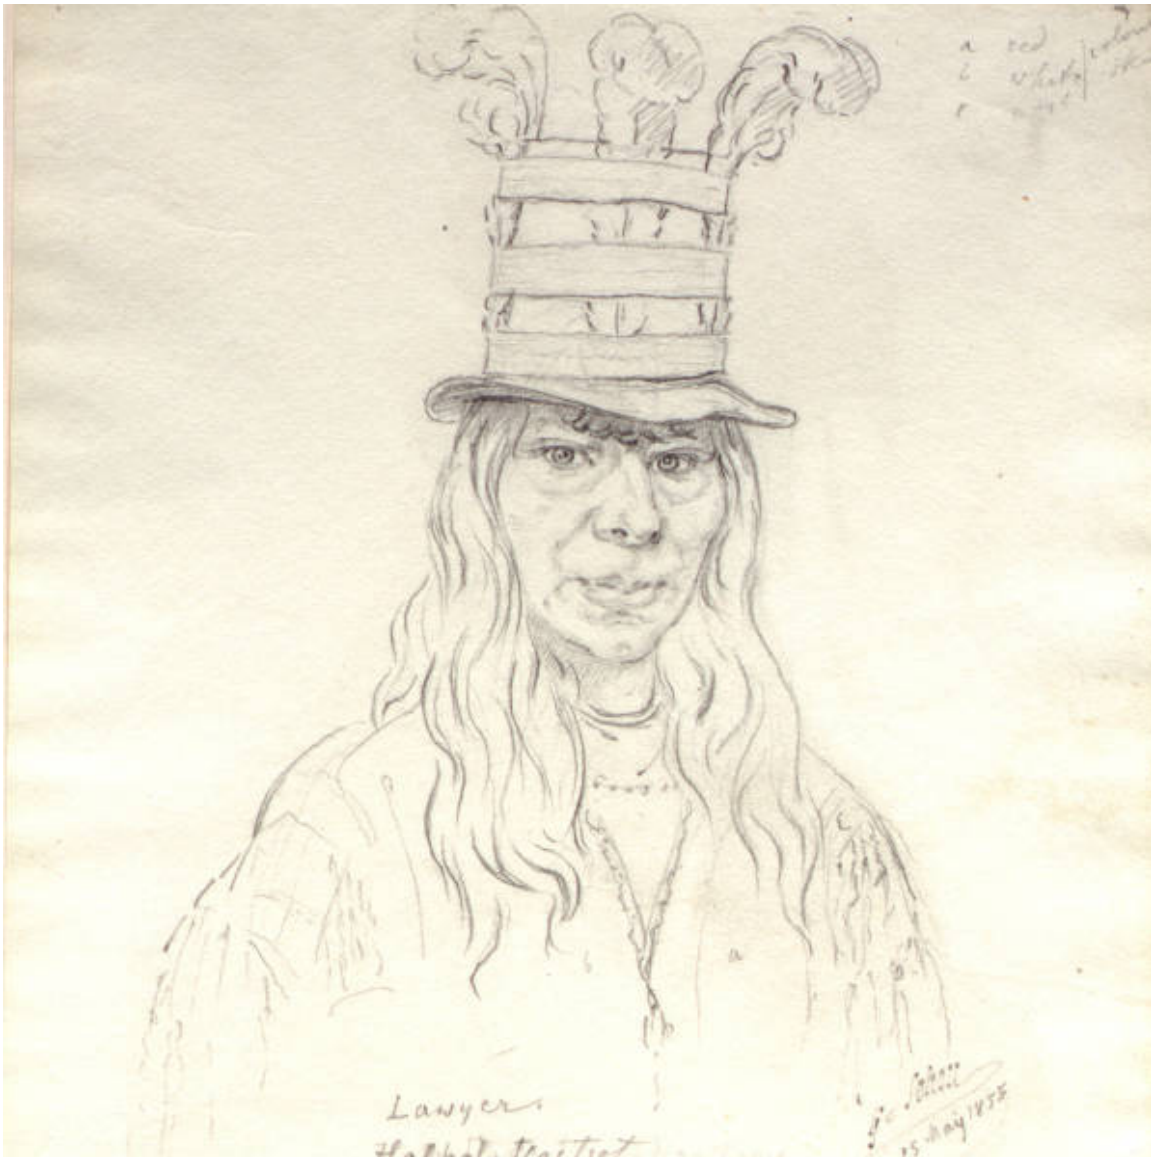

The Treaty Trail:
U. S. - Indian Treaty Councils in the Northwest

This portrait by Gustav Sohon shows Kamiakin, Head Chief of the Yakamas. He was six feet or greater in height and athletically built. Many perceived Kamiakin, accurately or not, as the most powerful leader of the Yakama.

Courtesy Washington State Historical Society.

The Treaty Trail:
U. S. - Indian Treaty Councils in the Northwest

Hallalhotsoot, or "Chief Lawyer", was portrayed as the Nez Perce leader at the Walla Walla Council by artist Gustav Sohon. Lawyer is pictured here wearing a silk top hat, decorated with ostrich plumes held in place by colored bands.

Courtesy Washington State Historical Society.

The Treaty Trail:
U. S. - Indian Treaty Councils in the Northwest

This portrait of Peo Peo Mox Mox was created on June 7, 1855 by Gustav Sohon. The clothing, as depicted by the artist, shows adaptation to Euro-American fashions. Around his neck, he wears a tomahawk pipe.

Courtesy Washington State Historical Society.

The Treaty Trail:
U. S. - Indian Treaty Councils in the Northwest

Spokan Garry was sketched on May 27, 1855 by Gustav Sohon. Although the notations on the image were written by Sohon, the signature is Garry's own.

Courtesy Washington State Historical Society.

The Treaty Trail:
U. S. - Indian Treaty Councils in the Northwest

This portrait of Weahatenamany (also known as “Young Chief”) depicts one of the head chiefs of the Cayuse. This title was inherited from his uncle, the former headman. Gustav Sohon created this illustration on June 8, 1855.

Courtesy Washington State Historical Society.